1. PEACE AND SECURITY

From Tension to Trust: Advancing Peace and Stability Across Our Region

IGAD has reaffirmed its commitment to building lasting stability in the Horn of Africa through its Peace and Security mandate, with the Conflict Early Warning and Response Mechanism (CEWARN)¹ at the center of its strategy.²

IGAD emphasizes that stability is achieved through safety, dialogue, and strong institutions that protect people and communities. Its guiding mission is to help societies prevent violence and foster harmony before crises escalate. This vision is being translated into practical support that communities can experience in their daily lives.

Key initiatives include risk monitoring to track emerging threats and intervene before tensions erupt into conflict, cross-border cooperation to reduce insecurity and protect shared communities, and community-led peacebuilding that empowers local leaders, women, and youth to drive reconciliation and dialogue. In addition, IGAD is working to strengthen national and regional systems to manage disputes and sustain calm.

By joining forces across borders, IGAD and CEWARN are not only preventing violence but also nurturing confidence, protecting livelihoods, and reinforcing unity among nations. From remote frontier areas to busy transport corridors, their efforts remain dedicated to making safety, cooperation, and stability part of everyday life in the Horn of Africa.

Secretariat of the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Meet with the Prime Minister of the Republic of the Sudan

The IGAD has reiterated its commitment to Sudan's unity and sovereignty following high-level consultations between IGAD Executive Secretary, H.E. Dr. Workneh Gebeyehu, and Sudan's Prime Minister, H.E. Dr. Kamil El-Tayeb Idris.³

The meeting focused on the prevailing peace and security situation in Sudan. IGAD condemned violations committed by the Rapid Support Forces and reaffirmed its support for Sudan's national institutions. The regional body welcomed Sudan's National Initiative to restore peace and stability and expressed readiness to reintegrate Sudan into IGAD's institutional framework.

IGAD emphasized that Sudan's return to the organization would strengthen regional cooperation and contribute to stability across the Horn of Africa. The Secretariat pledged continued engagement with Sudanese leadership and partners to advance peace, security, and sustainable development.

¹ The Conflict Early Warning and Response Mechanism (CEWARN) was established in 2002 under a protocol signed by IGAD Member States. It forms part of the African Peace and Security Architecture through its legal linkage with the African Union's continental early warning system. CEWARN's mandate includes collecting and analyzing information on potential and actual violent conflicts in the IGAD region, developing scenarios and response options, and conducting studies on specific conflict types and areas to support early response and prevention.

2. CLIMATE RESILIENCE AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Beyond the Horizon: Making Our Waters Work for Everyone

IGAD has reaffirmed its commitment to harnessing the potential of the Blue Economy as a driver of sustainable development across the region.⁴ Highlighting the importance of oceans, lakes, and rivers not merely as natural scenery but as engines of future prosperity, IGAD is advancing initiatives that translate policy into tangible benefits for communities.

The Blue Economy strategy⁵ focuses on creating new jobs by supporting local fishing and maritime industries, strengthening food security through sustainable management of aquatic resources, and protecting coastlines and rivers against the impacts of climate change. In addition, IGAD is investing in future-ready communities by equipping coastal and riverine towns with the tools and resources needed to thrive in a changing environment.

By fostering cross-border cooperation, IGAD emphasizes that the Blue Economy is not only about safeguarding ecosystems but also about unlocking a sustainable source of growth that benefits all citizens. From the shores of the Red Sea to inland river basins, the organization is working to ensure that water resources become a foundation for resilience, innovation, and inclusive economic development.

This renewed focus underscores IGAD's vision of turning the Blue Economy into a daily reality, reinforcing its broader agenda of regional integration and sustainable prosperity.

Building Strong Foundations Through Responsible Land Governance

IGAD has launched new efforts to strengthen responsible land governance across the Horn of Africa, recognizing land as a cornerstone of livelihoods, food systems, and stability in the region.⁶

Through its Agriculture and Environment portfolio and the Land Governance Programme⁷, IGAD is working with Member States to improve land management, ensure fair access, and safeguard this vital resource in the face of climate change.

⁴ Beyond the Horizon: Making Our Waters Work for Everyone <https://web.facebook.com/share/p/1C88Mv1Ek8/>

aquatic ecosystems by implementing protective and restorative measures. As a result, the BE revolves around the valorisation of both economics sectors and ecological components. See the strategy: <https://igad.int/wp-content/uploads/2022/03/IGAD-Blue-Strategy-Draft.pdf>

⁶ Building Strong Foundations Through Responsible Land Governance <https://web.facebook.com/share/p/17sD7tX5E/>

⁷ The IGAD Agriculture and Environment Division oversees regional work on agriculture, environment, natural resources, and land governance, while the Land Governance Programme (launched in 2015) strengthens member states' capacity to manage land-related challenges for food security, development, and conflict prevention.

The initiative is translating regional ambitions into practical action on the ground. Key priorities include modernizing land administration systems to ensure transparent allocation, reducing disputes over land and natural resources through dialogue and mediation, and encouraging climate-resilient land use practices that withstand droughts, floods, and environmental stress. IGAD is also assisting countries in updating laws and frameworks to align with regional standards, while strengthening community roles in land planning and sustainable management.

By improving how land is governed and shared, IGAD aims to boost food production, protect ecosystems, and support peaceful, prosperous communities across the Horn of Africa. Officials emphasize that responsible land governance is not only about securing resources but also about building strong foundations for regional stability and inclusive growth.

3. SOCIAL AND HUMANITARIAN AFFAIRS

Strengthening Health Security Across Our Region

IGAD has taken a major step toward strengthening regional health systems with the launch of its Pandemic Preparedness Project⁸ (PREPARE).⁹ Under its Health and Social Development mandate, IGAD is working closely with Member States to ensure that health threats are detected, prevented, and addressed before they escalate.

The PREPARE initiative emphasizes three critical pillars of resilience: timely information, strong coordination, and shared preparedness. By enhancing surveillance and data-sharing mechanisms, IGAD aims to improve early warning systems across borders. The project also prioritizes regional collaboration, enabling countries to mount unified responses to outbreaks and emergencies. In addition, PREPARE is building frameworks for joint planning, training, and resource mobilization, ensuring that communities are better equipped to withstand future health crises.

IGAD leaders noted that the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted the urgent need for collective action and robust systems. PREPARE is designed to translate those lessons into lasting reforms, safeguarding lives and reducing vulnerabilities across the Horn of Africa. With this initiative, IGAD is reinforcing its commitment to building resilient, interconnected health systems that can protect populations and sustain development in the face of global health challenges.

Empowering Minds: Transforming Education Across the Horn of Africa

IGAD is accelerating efforts to transform education across its Member States, unveiling a comprehensive Education, Science, Technology, and Innovation (ESTI) portfolio designed to harmonize learning systems and expand opportunities for all learners, including refugees and displaced youth.¹⁰

At the heart of the initiative is a commitment to turn regional agreements into tangible classroom realities. Key highlights include:

- Regional Qualifications Framework: A unified system enabling students and professionals to study and work seamlessly across borders.
- Teacher Empowerment: Expanded training programs to equip educators with modern pedagogy and psychosocial support, particularly in crisis-affected areas.
- Inclusive Scholarships: Dedicated funding streams to ensure refugees and vulnerable youth gain access to higher education and vocational training.
- Vocational Excellence: Modernization of Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) centers, with a focus on digital and green skills aligned to the 2026 job market.

¹⁰ Empowering Minds: Transforming Education Across the Horn of Africa <https://web.facebook.com/share/p/1HXzrxYPV/>

- Policy Alignment: Support for the Djibouti Declaration, which integrates refugee learners into national education systems.

IGAD officials emphasized that these measures are not only about education but also about fostering innovation, reducing inequality, and building resilience. By strengthening regional integration through education, the organization aims to secure a brighter and more competitive future for the Horn of Africa.

This ambitious agenda underscores IGAD's vision of an interconnected education ecosystem—one that bridges skills gaps, empowers teachers, and ensures no learner is left behind.

ICPALD Hosts 2nd Multi-Sectoral One Health Coordination Forum in Mandera Cluster

The IGAD Centre for Pastoral Areas and Livestock Development (ICPALD)¹¹ has convened the 2nd Multi-Sectoral One Health Coordination Forum for the Mandera Cluster, bringing together key stakeholders from Ethiopia, Kenya, and Somalia.¹² The forum aims to strengthen multisectoral coordination and harmonize protocols, surveillance, and data sharing across the three countries.

The workshop gathered representatives from the Ministries of Agriculture and Livestock, Health, and Environment, alongside leading development partners. Discussions focused on enhancing collaboration between sectors to address cross-border health challenges, including zoonotic diseases, environmental risks, and public health emergencies.

By fostering a unified approach under the One Health framework,¹³ ICPALD is working to ensure that human, animal, and environmental health are addressed in an integrated manner. The Mandera Cluster, a critical cross-border region, has been identified as a priority area for joint action due to its unique vulnerabilities and shared ecosystems.

Officials emphasized that the forum is a vital step toward building resilience, improving surveillance systems, and ensuring that timely information flows across borders. The initiative reflects IGAD's broader commitment to regional integration and sustainable development through coordinated health and environmental strategies.

IGAD has commenced a three-day Capacity-Building Workshop for Legislators, Policymakers, and Line Ministries on Refugee Protection, reinforcing regional efforts to support displaced persons hosted in Ethiopia.¹⁴

The workshop aims to strengthen collective understanding, commitment, and coordination among Ethiopian legislators, policymakers, and key stakeholders in advancing refugee protection and inclusion. Speaking on behalf of the IGAD Secretariat, Mr. Kassahun Beyene, Refugee Protection Officer, emphasized IGAD's role in operationalizing the Regional Refugee Protection

Ato Yakob Yala, Deputy Director General of the Refugees and Returnees Service (RRS),¹⁶ highlighted Ethiopia's continued commitment to keeping its borders open to asylum seekers despite economic and social challenges. He expressed gratitude to IGAD for financing the program and acknowledged the contributions of all partners involved in organizing the event.

Participants engaged with national, regional, and global refugee protection frameworks, including Ethiopia's Refugee Proclamation No. 1110/2019,¹⁷ the Makatet (Inclusion) Roadmap,¹⁸ IGAD policy instruments, and the Global Compact on Refugees.¹⁹ The workshop enhanced parliamentary leadership and oversight, with commitments to advance subsidiary legislation, strengthen budgetary scrutiny for refugee inclusion, and promote sustained parliamentary engagement on displacement issues.

¹⁹ The Global Compact on Refugees (GCR) was affirmed by the United Nations General Assembly in December 2018 as a framework for more predictable and equitable responsibility-sharing in refugee protection. It seeks to strengthen international cooperation, ease pressures on host countries, enhance refugee self-reliance, expand access to third-country solutions, and support conditions for safe and dignified return. The GCR complements the 1951 Refugee Convention and its 1967 Protocol, providing a modernized approach to global refugee governance.

Stakeholders agreed on the importance of an integrated, implementation-focused approach anchored in a jointly owned Action Matrix involving Parliament, RRS, and line ministries. This framework emphasizes policy harmonization, improved data and monitoring systems, and coordinated national and regional action to address the root causes of displacement.

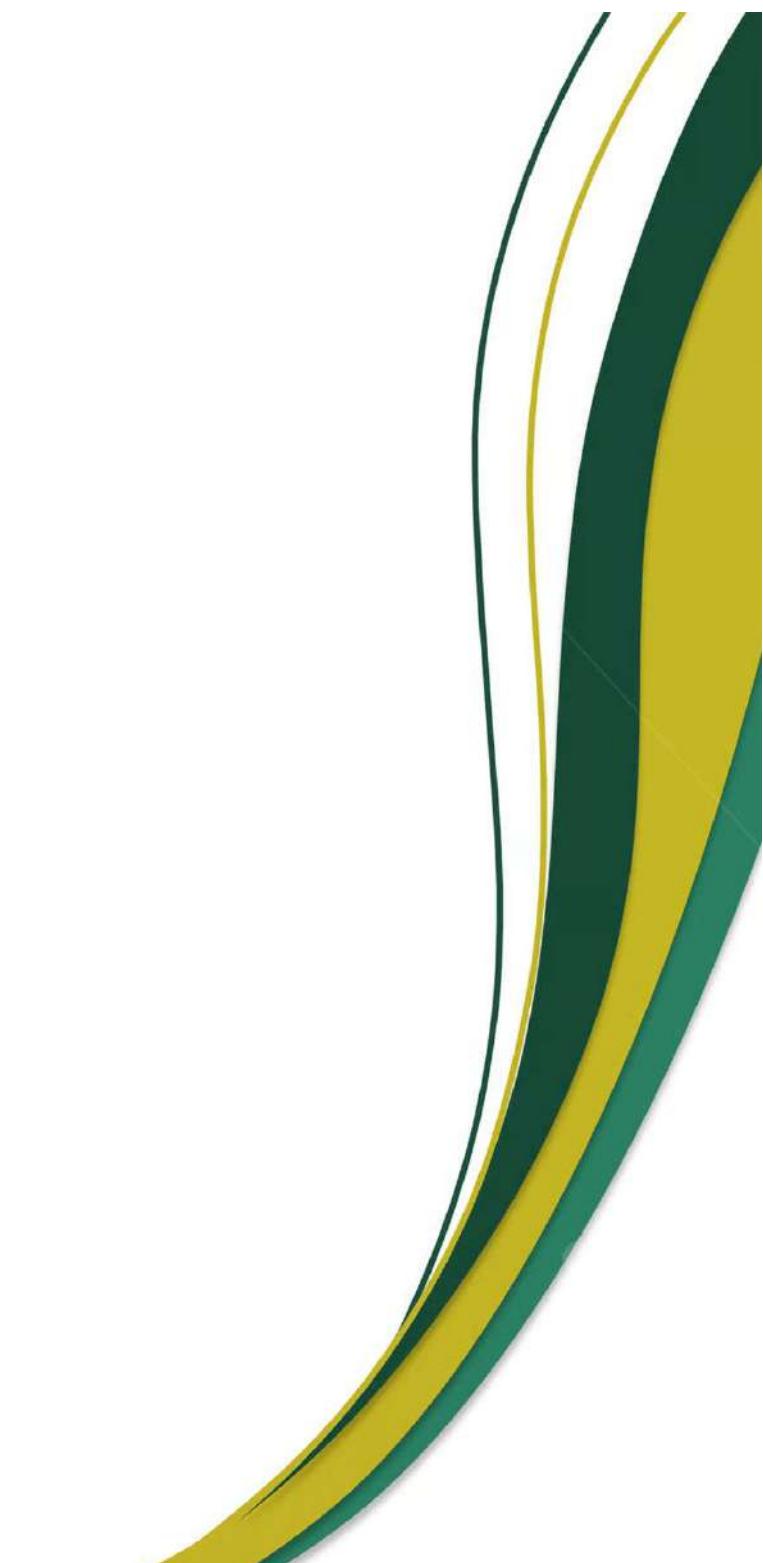

The event brought together members of the Ethiopian Parliament, government institutions, humanitarian actors, civil society, refugee representatives, and the IGAD Secretariat. A multi-stakeholder coordination platform was consolidated to support collaborative policy development and unified advocacy for sustainable international financing.

Participants endorsed a strategic shift in narrative, positioning refugee inclusion as an investment in development, stability, and regional integration. The workshop laid the foundation for stronger legislative action, coordinated implementation, and sustainable refugee protection, contributing to Ethiopia's long-term stability and regional leadership in displacement governance.

This initiative follows the endorsement of the Regional Refugee Protection Policy Framework²⁰ by Ethiopia and other IGAD member states in September 2023, marking a significant step toward harmonized refugee management and protection across the region.

IGAD's participation underscored its commitment to supporting member states in addressing critical development challenges and fostering resilience through shared initiatives.

The Mogadishu meeting highlighted the importance of coordinated regional action and international partnerships in unlocking opportunities for energy access, which remains central to economic transformation and stability in the Horn of Africa.

Powering Peace & Prosperity Through Shared Cross-Border Investment

The Government of Kenya today convened a high-level Ministerial Briefing at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the Daua River Basin Development Initiative, focusing on the Mandera Triangle that links Kenya, Ethiopia, and Somalia.²⁵

The meeting was chaired by H.E. Musalia Mudavadi, Prime Cabinet Secretary of Kenya, and brought together Mandera County leaders led by Governor Mohamed Khalif, senior government officials, and representatives from the IGAD, including Dr. Fatuma Ibrahim Adan, Head of IGAD Mission to Kenya.

The Daua River Basin sustains more than 3 million people across the drought-prone tri-border region. Discussions advanced plans for the proposed Daua River Dam, which is projected to become Kenya's second-largest dam with a capacity of 2 billion cubic metres. The dam is expected to irrigate 1.2 million acres, transforming food security, livelihoods, and resilience in the region.

Officials emphasized that the initiative represents a major step toward regional cooperation, climate adaptation, and sustainable development. By harnessing shared water resources, the project aims to strengthen cross-border collaboration while delivering tangible benefits to communities in Kenya, Ethiopia, and Somalia.

5. ORGANIZATIONAL AFFAIRS

40 Years of Regional Purpose. One Shared Future

IGAD's 40th anniversary in 2026 marks a pivotal moment for the Horn of Africa, highlighting four decades of regional cooperation, resilience, and institutional transformation.²⁶ The milestone coincides with the ratification of a new IGAD Treaty, strengthening its legal framework and deepening integration among member states.

During the past 40 years IGAD stands out for its multifaceted contributions to regional stability and development. In the sphere of peace and security, IGAD has played a central role in mediating conflicts, notably facilitating peace processes in Sudan, South Sudan, and Somalia. Beyond security, the organization has advanced a humanitarian and development agenda by coordinating responses to recurrent droughts, famines, and displacement crises, while simultaneously promoting resilience through climate intelligence and disaster preparedness. Economically, IGAD has sought to harmonize trade and infrastructure policies, complementing the integration efforts of other regional blocs such as COMESA. Furthermore, IGAD has strengthened health sovereignty by enhancing pandemic preparedness, delivering medical infrastructure, and supporting member states during the COVID-19 pandemic and other public health emergencies. Collectively, these achievements underscore IGAD's evolving role as a cornerstone of peace, resilience, and integration in the Horn of Africa.

As IGAD approaches its 40th anniversary, BRIDGE Research and Innovation for Democratic Governance and Enhanced Peace is proud to extend its warmest congratulations to the organization for its four decades of transformative regional service. As a specialized hub for parliamentary affairs, peace, and development within the region, BRIDGE aims to serve as a vital knowledge partner and a trusted source of evidence-based analysis for IGAD. We are eager to deepen our collaboration, offering innovative policy research and specialized training to amplify IGAD's impact and reinforce its commitment to a peaceful, integrated, and democratically governed Horn of Africa.

³⁹ The Agreement Establishing the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) was signed in 1996, replacing the earlier Intergovernmental Authority on Drought and Development (IGADD) of 1986. The revised treaty expanded IGAD's mandate beyond drought and desertification to include peace and security, economic cooperation, and regional integration among its member states in the Horn of Africa. <https://icpald.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/02/IGAD-agreement.pdf> infrastructure development, health systems, trade, and social progress.

According to IGAD Executive Secretary Dr. Workneh Gebeyehu, Somalia's ratification coincides with IGAD's 40th anniversary⁴⁰ and contributes to reaching the required two-thirds threshold for the treaty's operationalisation. This milestone consolidates the legal foundation for deeper regional integration and coordinated action in pursuit of sustainable development across the Horn of Africa.

Somalia's ratification can be interpreted as both a symbolic reaffirmation of regional solidarity and a practical step toward institutionalising cooperation. It underscores the evolving role of IGAD as a regional organisation capable of addressing multidimensional challenges ranging from security and governance to environmental and economic resilience.

Shaping the Architects of the Horn of Africa

IGAD is celebrating the strides made by its Leadership Academy (ILA), established in 2022 to bridge the leadership gap in the Horn of Africa.⁴¹ The Academy is shaping young visionaries into ethical leaders equipped to guide the region toward stability, prosperity, and integration.

In 2025, the ILA narrowed down more than 3,000 applicants to three elite cohorts, reflecting the growing demand for transformative leadership. The Academy's curriculum blends African philosophies such as Ubuntu⁴² and Ujamaa⁴³ with global governance standards, creating a unique model for ethical and resilient leadership.

The program emphasizes ethical governance by merging local wisdom with international best practices, policy innovation that empowers youth to drive regional integration and social reform, and resilient leadership that translates demographic potential into economic stability.

IGAD officials note that the Academy is not merely training students but cultivating pioneers who will define the future of the Horn of Africa. By investing in the next generation, the ILA is positioning itself as a cornerstone of regional transformation, ensuring that the values of integrity, inclusivity, and innovation remain central to leadership in the decades ahead.

⁴⁰ In 2026, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) marked its 40th anniversary, commemorating its establishment in 1986 as the Intergovernmental Authority on Drought and Development (IGADD). The anniversary highlighted IGAD's evolution from a drought-focused body into a regional organization with a broader mandate encompassing peace and security, economic integration, climate resilience, and sustainable development in the Horn of Africa.
